With the absence of Chief Kevin Zim With the absence of Chief Kevin Zim-mermann, who has been on an extended leave, the Shafter Police Department is working as "business as usual," according to Acting Chief Randy Milligan. The de-partment has refused to give details about The only reason given for the leave that has lasted nearly six weeks is that it is related to a workers compensation claim. City Manager Gabriel Gonzalez said that Zim-mermann would not elaborate any further.

In a wide-ranging interview Tuesday with Milligan and Gonzalez, the two talked about the current state of the department.

Milligan said that there is no timetable on Chief Zimmermann's return but said that the city is in good hands with the staff that the chief has put together. When asked about the recent defamation of over 50 graves in the Shafter Cemetery, Milligan did say that he would like to clarify initial responses to the incident by

"While it is within a person's right to practice their religion, it is not lawful to de-fame someone's grave that is not related to me someone's grave that is not related to you, or is not affiliated with that religion." Milligan said that there was a case doc-umented and that they would file it as vanumented and that they would file it as vandalism. "We misspoke on that and would like to clear that up," he said. "The practice of one's religion does not include messing with graves other than your loved ones or those involved in the religion. It is not okay to include persons who you are not affiliated with."

The Shafter police have seen the depar-ture of four officers and two dispatchers who joined the new department in Wasco, including former Shafter Sgt. Lionel Lopez. Milligan said that with the "excellent See SHAFTER Page 8

After moving around California with his family following the crops, he moved to Wasco in 1986 when he married his wife, MagdaElena.

"It's been a happy life, and I love my town," he said. 'It's the community, the people I've met over time, talking to the farmers and dairy people, working with them, enjoing the country and the freedom of being out in the open, not enclosed in the city. I just enjoy it.'

Martin attended trade school and worked as a mechanic for 17 years at a local dealership. In 2006, he began his first business, servicing the dairy industry under R&M Farm Service. "It is what first in-spired me to be an entrepreneur."

VERONICA JACUINDE

Brad Maberry, a dedicated educator and community leader, has been an integral part of the Wasco Union Elementary School District since 1996. Starting as a teacher, he has gradually climbed the ranks and, in 2023, assumed the role of superintendent.

He is a native of Bakersfield but has worked in Wasco since 1996. "It's a magnificent small town with caring parents and community members; the small-town culture is really what has kept me here."

Maberry has stayed involved in the community as a member of the Wasco Rotary Club since 2011, sits on the board of directors of the Ronald McDonald House in Baersfield and was with the Exchange Club from 2003 until Maberry has been in education for 28 years, holding positions as a teacher for the district for seven years, assistant principal for four years at Palm Avenue and Thomas Jefferson middle schools, the first principal at Teresa Burke Elementary School, assistant superintendent for the district and now as superintendent.

He said his position is challenging but exciting, "There's a multitude of responsibilities when running an entire school district. It is a very satisfying job. Landfill on the verge of self sustainability

The Shafter/Wasco Landfill took one more step to being a completely self-sus-tainable facility when it announced the completion of a system that will bag compost for local residents.

The landfill has made compost available for Kern County residents for a little over a year, allowing them to pick it up for their gardens, compost piles and many other uses.

"More and more people are getting in-volved in operating their own compost piles, letting them fertilize their own gar-dens," says Lynnda Martin, of American Refuse in Wasco. "We have had several events in which residents have taken tons of the compost material at each event."

One of the downsides of this practice is the inability for some residents to transport the compost material to their homes.

Port the compost maternal to their nomes.

"Before, if people didn't have a pickup truck, they had a problem being able to get it home. Now, we'll have pallets of this available. People will be able to come to the corporation yard in the very short future and pick this product up," said Shaffer Assistant Public Works Director Kevin Gibeon.

Gibson said that this new development is an example of the county helping residents comply with new laws intended to reduce emissions in the air.

New machinery is making it possible for residents to pick up compost already

SHS students broadcasting to community

JAMIE STEWART

Anyone wanting to know what is going on at Shafter High School only needs to tune in daily for an undate pre-an update, pre sented by the students at SHS, over their HQTV broadcast, which is available on their YouTube channel.

The broadcast journalism class, taught by Jerald Pierucci is getting ready to up-grade so the class will be able to broadcast across even more mediums, allowing them to cover volleyball and , basketball games live for the entire community.

When Pierucci started at Shafter High, he talked to Principal Russell Shipley about offering a broadcast journalism class, similar to the one that he taught at East High School. "Mr. Shipley was all for the idea, and we moved forward on obtain-ing the equipment needed for the class. We began with a simple broadcast of the daily announcements, plus a few highlights, such as what is in our daily bulletin."

Laurel Franz works on a recent morning's broadcast.

This grew into a regular broadcast of school news and activities. "Every year, we worked on getting more equipment, so we could do more things for the class. We just finished producing a broadcast of the play put on by the Shafter High Drama Club, which can be viewed by anyone in the community".

According to Pierucci, the school re-equipment from the Kern High School District that improved their facilities and capabilities. "We are nearing about $750,000 worth of equipment that we are using in our projects," he said. Pierucci also said that he is in the produce of prititions are proposed but the produce of of writing up a proposal that would make the class a two-year program. "After finishing this class, the students will have knowledge that would help them advance in the field if they are interested in pursuing it."

These students include Laurel Franz, who is in her second year of the class. "My counselor suggested this class to me, and at first I wasn't real excited about it. But I realized that it is such a fun class, and it is now my favorite.

Franz, who plans on pursuing a career in film production, said that one thing she loves about the class is that the students are given tasks to do to meet goals, but they are pretty much left on their own to get the jobs done. "We do a lot of the production by ourselves, responsible for the jobs, giving us a real feeling of accomplishment," she said. Another student is Alexis Lopez. Lopez has been in the class for over a year and said has been in the class for over a year and said that she enjoys it a lot and is using the experi-ence to prepare her for after high school. "I want to be a sports broadcaster after school, so this class has been perfect for me, giving so much valuable experience and skills that I can use for the rest of my life."

Pastor Brian Klassen serving with purpose

VERONICA JACUINDE

Pastor Brian Klassen is the new chap-lain of the Wasco Police Department, be-ing a bridge between the police force and the community. He comes with almost three decades of experience in ministry and said it is an exciting opportunity.

"I believe coming to Wasco means that I'm called not only to pastor a church but also to serve the community. It's working with Chief [Charles] Fivecoat; he is an amazing man. I've had the pleasure to meet several police officers, and I think they are termendous individuals who are also look-ing to serve the community of Wasco."

As a chaplain, he said there are times when an individual may feel more com-fortable talking to a chaplain rather than a police officer. "And it's helping assist the officers and the community in crisis scenarios when sometimes there are traumatic events where a chaplain can be beneficial."

Klassen is enthusiastic about getting to know the people of Wasco. "I've been here since September last year when my wife and I became the lead pastors of Taber-nacle of Praise here in Wasco. Since we ar-rived, we fell in love with the community. We want to benefit and help them lead the

We want to beneat and neip them lead the life God has designed for them.

"And one of the greatest examples of leadership was Jesus. And he came to serve and not to be served. So, both as a pastor and chaplain, that is my motivation. To serve the community of Wasco and the surrounding areas."

He believes Chief Fivecoat, the mayor and the City Council have a great vision for the city. "They really do care about those in the community, and I'm looking forward to working with all of them, the other pastors in the community and the other two chaplains."

Klassen was born in Porterville, but spent much time living in Terra Bella, a small town in Tulare County. "I've been in ministry for over 25 years. I spent the last three years as an assistant pastor in Grover Beach and then was asked to come to Wasco. After coming here the first time, we knew this was where God wanted us."

As the new pastor of the Tabernacle of Praise, he said it's going well. "We are multicultural, multigenerational and faith-based, and are part of the Church of God in Cleveland, Tennessee. We have tremendous members who love Wasco. Many have been here at the church for 30 years or more. We are all praying for the city of Wasco and those that live here."

He said that being a spiritual servant is a calling. "I enjoy helping people and supporting people through different life events. And it's really a call to serve people. As a pastor, you love people and care about people, which drives me. I want people to live to the fullest of what they can accomplish."

At the City Council meeting on Tuesday, the Wasco City Council meeting on Itues-day, the Wasco City Council recognized the newly formed Wasco Police Officers Association. Employees of the department formed the WPOA to represent officers and other staff when negotiating a memo-randum of understanding with the city.

In Wasco, as is common in most cities, the MOU document acts as a labor contract to establish hours, wages, working conditions and policies for its members in cultural workers and communities affected by treated pesticide areas. "Their work is essential," Mayor Alex Garcia said. He added, "Education is important, as is the work they do by advocating and providing information to the community, especially for those affected here locally.

Also, at the meeting, new police depart-ment recruits were honored with a badgepinning ceremony. Police Sgt. Lloyd Ga-lutira said, "It was great. We had a lot of support from the community and some of the prior agencies." Galutira has been in law enforcement for nearly 18 years, having worked for the

How language works

RUBEN ZARTMAN zer Reformed Church, Shafte

Do you remember the Amelia Bedelia books, by Peggy Parish? Amelia Bedelia works as a housekeeper, but is constantly causing disasters be-cause she inevitably misunderstands what she is told.

At one point she's roped into a neighborhood baseball game. When she's encouraged to steal the bases and run home, she picks up the ob-ject used to mark third base and ject used to mark third base and sprints back to her house. Another time when she was told to give the chickens scraps, she took small pieces of cloth to the hencoop. Amelia Bedelia's problem is that she always takes words strictly at face value, in one meaning she has learned for them, without understanding that the same word can include more than one idea or that words are sometimes used figuratively.

The books about Amelia Bedelia have often made me laugh. But in this little comedy of errors suitable for children, there is also a deep lesson. Really understanding what someone says requires understanding words in context. A word doesn't just have one meaning. Words communicate mean ing by working together. "Home" when talking about baseball does not mean the house where you live!

When it comes to reading and ex-plaining the Bible, there are a lot of Amelia Bedelias out there these days. The Bible uses ordinary human language to communicate some very big ideas. Understanding what it means calls for careful attention to how the words are working together. This science or art of interpretation is called

A huge part of proper hermeneutics is understanding the sentences of the Bible inside the Bible's own frame of reference. With reference to baseball, "home" means "home base." With "home" means "home base." With reference to chickens, "scraps" means leftover food, not leftover fabric. In the same way, as the late Alec Motyer would say, "Bible words have Bible meanings."

meanings."

One way we act like Amelia Bedelia with the Bible is when we ap proach Scripture to find out what the Bible says about some special question we have — about history or prophecy, science or behavior. But it may be that the Bible didn't mean to answer that particular question. If we squeeze an answer out of the Bible when a subject doesn't fall within its sphere of reference, we run the risk of making a mistake just as silly as any in An lia Bedelia.

March 2, 1956 -Jan. 30, 2024 Raul Lopez, 67, passed away on Jan. 30, 2024, in Bakersfield. He was born on March 2, 1956 in Mercedes,Texas to Juan and Flavia Lopez.

Raul migrated to California at the age of 9 to Huron, Calif., later moving to Shafter, where he made Shafter his permanent residence.

Raul attended all the local Shafter schools. At a young age of 18 he went searching for jobs in various locations. Without any luck, Raul went to Button willow Warehouse in But-tonwillow and asked for a job. Again, he was turned down until he told the manager, "How am I sup-posed to find a job if no one wants to take a chance on me?" He was hired. He worked at Buttonwillow Warehouse until he moved to Simplot, ending his working career at Nutrient, formally Crop Production. He was an agricultural technician for 48 years un-

Wasco High wrestling team triumphs

VERONICA JACUINDE

The Wasco High School wrestling team, under the guidance of Head Coach Juan Gallardo, has emerged victorious from the South Sequoia League Championship. The team's achievements and the dedication of the Coach C tion of both players and coaches have led to a memorable season.

About the win, Coach Gallardo said, "It's wonderful. Overall, with varsity boys, varsity girls and the JV boys, we had 20

champions."

As the head coach, Gallardo oversees 48 wrestlers with the help of eight other coaches. "I've got a great coach-ing staff with coach Garth Wara [varsity boys], Garret Johnson [varsity boys], Joe Blanchard [varsity girls], Danny Arellano [varsity girls], Anselmo Arellano [varsity girls], Angel Romero [JV boys], Christian Aranda [JV boys] and Jose Robledo [var-

Gallardo said winning was significant.
"This group of kids has put a lot of work in the off season [so] that they could be this successful this year. The trips these kids successful this year. The trips these kids made in the off season, where they went to Utah and Las Vegas twice, when they went to San Diego and Reno, Nevada, wrestling at these national tournaments, got them ready for the tournament in Kern County."

He said a lot of hard work went into it.

"For the kids, it was all year long. We do a yearlong program, and they sacrifice their time from their friends and families to attend these tournaments and practice. Be-cause there is no program without the kids."

The competition was difficult. "Our competition for the last five years has been Cesar Chavez [in Delano], and they always bring a good group. They put in a lot of good time all year just like we do, so their coach, Roman [Salcedo], makes me a bet-ter coach because I know they are working hard, too." Gallardo said that the wrestlers relied on their superior skills and strengths. "It was their work ethic; they stayed focused, showed up to practice, they were leaders in the mat room and weight room. They had good grades at school and showed leader-ship in the classroom."

He explained that to prepare for the championship, "Mentally, we talked to them and gave them daily goals, then weekly and monthly goals. And then we a good kid at home. If you take care of those things, it makes it easier to be successful."

During critical moments, the team comes together to support one another.
"They call each other out when they have an issue with each other. They call each other out when they see a guy or girl wrestling incorrectly; they'll go and correct them. So, they hold each other accountable. And when one of our wrestlers' wrestles, they'll

He said the camaraderie between the wrestlers is strong. "It's good. They have a lot of fun. They we been with each other all year long. They spend a lot of time together. They know each other like brothers and sisters. And if they get into arguments together, you have to let them work it out by talking through it, which helps build that bond."

The wrestlers have improved and developed throughout the season. "By being consistent and showing up at 5:30 in the morning to work out and then go to school all day, with practice at 4 until 6:15 and still having to go home to do homework. So that's them being consistent day in and day out. That allows them to be successful,

His goal for the future? "That we're in playoffs. Next week, we are wrestling at Hoover High School in Fresno and hoping to win a Valley title. We have a legitir shot at winning it."

Shafter PD carrying on with absence of C

From Page 1 recruitment" that the department has and the cadets that they have going through the Kern Sheriff's Academy now, the staff-ing at Shafter will be fine. "We have quite a few new recruits and some cadets who will be finishing the academy soon, so we are in good shape when it comes to staffing,"

Milligan also commented on the new Milligan also commented on the new substation that will be located in the Gos-samer Grove area. "We are on track with the plans for the substation, and by all ac-counts, we should be able to open the sub-station by the end of the year."

Milligan, who has been in charge for over a month now, has been with the Shafter force since 2003. Capt. Milligan was raised in a small coapt. Islanding was talsed in a sinant town in Kern County. He became a county Sheriff Reserve in 1999, and was hired as an extra help deputy sheriff shortly after.

During the off season, as an extra help deputy sheriff, he worked as a Kern County Child Support Investigator and Housing Authority investigator, assigned to the Shafter area, where he realized how much Shafter reminded him of the town he was raised in, with the presence of hometown and community values.

He was hired as a Shafter police officer in June of 2003. He quickly volunteered for the special assignments of traffic officer and police fleet manager. As a fleet manager, he worked diligently to bring the fleet to a professional and functioning level. He soon realized that emergency vehicles were becoming more complex and that a tremendous amount of work was required to get these units service ready. In 2004, he began to standardize the fleet by converting the fleet patrol units back to black and white patrol vehicles, as well as outfitting the fleet with consistent emergency equip-

In 2004, he became the department's K-9 handler, where he demonstrated how a highly dependable and devoted K-9 program should function. He worked with his partner Dak until Dak's retirement in 2007

He was selected as officer of the year in 2004 by his peers. He distinguished himself by receiving commendations from the Kern County and Deriver Colorado District Attorney Prosecutors for his high quality of arrest and investigations. He has quanty of arrest and investigations. Fire has received numerous positive comments from his supervisors regarding his high level of loyalty and dedication.

In 2006, as he advanced in his career, he saw an opportunity to influence the future of the department and became a field training officer. In 2006, he was promoted to a senior patrol officer and in February of 2010 was again promoted to sergeant. In July of 2021 he was promoted to lieuten-ant; two years later, he was promoted to Captain.

Captain.
When asked about the recent article in the Shafter Press about the defamation of over 50 graves in the Shafter Cemetery, Milligan did say that he would like to clarify something for the record.
"While it is within a person's right to practice their religion, it is not lawful to defame someone's grave that is not related to you, or is not affiliated with that religion."

gion."
Milligan said that there was a case documented and that they would file it as vandalism. "We misspoke on that and would like to clear that up. The practice of one's religion does not include messing with graves other than your loved ones or those involved in the religion. It is not okay to include persons who you are not affiliated with."
