The Fred Starrh Performing Arts Center at Shafter High School was packed on Friday morning, full of fourth- to sixth-grade students from all around the area as they listened to the music of the Shafter Symphony Orchestra. Led by conductor Stephen Penner, the ensemble introduced the students to a kind of music the majority had never had the chance to hear.

Students from Redwood, Golden Oak, Sequoia, Maple, Rio Bravo Greeley, North

Kern Christian and Buttonwillow schools were bused over to Shafter High for the special concert.

The asymphony is a group of local musicians who gather several times a year to practice and then perform at different venues. This time, they were preparing for their performance at the Shafter Colours Festival. The symphony is able to put on these shows for the school children in big part thanks to a grant that was received from the Kern Arts Council. See SYMPHONY Page 5

EDITOR'S NOTE | Jamie Stewart

A chance to love again

I wrote an editorial last month that was really tough for me. We had lost our dog TJ, leaving a big hole in my heart that I didn't think would ever get filled again. When we first lost him, I didn't even want to think about getting another dog. People would tell me that getting another dog would be the best thing for me. I couldn't imagine ever having to go through that again. It hurt so much that I couldn't think

I would look around the house, or even do small things like taking out the trash, and realize that he was not there to trail behind me, saying hi to his doggie friends in the alley on our way to the trash bin. I thought long and hard about how to heal. I finally realized that the love we had was still there, just waiting to help another dog who was in need of a good home, just like TJ was when we first laid eyes on each other at the shelter. Through a lot of praying, I realized that it was okay to think about giving that love to another needy soul, giving him or her a chance of a better

I was looking on Craigslist, waiting for that "ah ha" moment, one that would let me know that I was doing the right thing. Well, that moment came the other day. I saw a brindle puppy, with the look in the face like TJ when he was a younger puppy. The ad said that she was five months old and needing a new home. I talked to my wife and she told me that we could go get her. She was in Tulare. My son, Nick, and I headed to Tulare to pick her up. Nick wasn't as sold as I was because he was actually hoping for another boy. Well, all doubts were long gone after we met her. She came bounding up to us, covering us with kisses. The lady giving her up said that they just didn't have the room or time for her. You could tell that she was in need of attention and she was drinking it up big time.

I couldn't stop petting her and getting those kisses all the way home. But, instead of being overjoyed, I was happy and sad at the same time. When I looked at her, I was happy for another chance to have that special companion, but sad when I looked at her and thought of TJ. It all built up to the trip I made to Walmart to get Maggie the supplies that we would need for her.

I started crying on the way over there, actually talking to TJ. I told him that I still missed him so much and that I would always love him. I almost felt guilty for getting another dog, in some ways feeling like I betrayed that bond that we had. But, the more I thought and prayed, the more I realized that what we had would never really be replaced. I told him that I would never forget him and I know that I never will. But, when I look at my baby girl's face, and see that tail wag and her big ears going up like little antennas on the top of her head, I know that there is room enough for her. I think that TJ would have just loved her, having a little sister to boss around like he liked to do to his cousin, my older son's dog Gunner.

I am so happy now, knowing that I will be able to even take the lessons that I learned having TJ in my life and be a better companion than I was before. Thank you TJ for the memories. I still love you and always will. I thank God for you TJ and I also thank God for Maggie, this little girl that I have fallen in love with already.

The school cafeteria was decorated and looked like a formal dance ball room, with balloons and streamers, splashed with colorful centerpieces on the tables.

At the dance, the fathers came dressed in their Sunday best, along with their daughters, who were dressed in dresses, some with tiaras, ready to enjoy a special time. Principal Anamarie Mendez was the DJ for the evening and started off the dance with "Girls Just Want to Have Fun." This got the girls up and dancing, swatting the decorative balloons in the air, giving a rousing start to the night.

There was plenty of refreshments at the event for the fathers and daughters, who were were treated to a variety of food, snacks and A photo booth was set

They offer a variety of croissants filled with everything from egg and cheese, turkey and cheese, sausage, and ham and cheese. According to Yen, "Our most popular donut right now is still the glazed and the maple, and the ham and cheese croissant is very popular." They also make their own bagels, which come in a variety of flavors.

Yen said that they also are open for lunch and offer a menu including tuna, ham and cheese, roast beef and turkey, all of them served on their fluffy and buttery croissants.

Yen also mentioned that they listen to the customers and try to keep up with the trends and wants of the next generation. They now serve a great variety of smoothies and coffee drinks, as well as coffee, milk and juice. There is mocha, capacino, Thai tea, and one of the most trending drinks now, the boba drinks. They offer a variety of the drinks dotted with pearls of tapioca.

The city in turn flocks to the shop, enjoying the food and fellowship every morning. "I come here a lot. It's not just for the great donuts and food and coffee, but also for the feeling of community," said David Allison, who regularly makes the drive from the Rosedale area.

PASTOR'S CORNER

Time to look inside for God's wisdom

PASTOR JIM NEAL

"I do not think much of a man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday." -- Abraham Lin-

Doesn't it seem as you look around, read the newspaper or listen to or watch the daily news that one of the key concepts missing in all of humanness is the quality of wisdom? A very old dictionary that I have in my position, actually the 1953 College Edition of Webster's New World, defines wisdom in this way: "the quality of being wise; the power of judging rightly and following the soundest course of action, based on knowledge, experience, understanding."

As we watch and read the pundits of politics, economics, academia and even religion and measure them by Webster's definition, I must admit I wonder if they do base their words and actions by knowledge, experience and understanding. Am I alone or biased to believe that it seems as though most decision of extreme importance seems to be based on what is either socially and politically advantageous or what appears to "feel good" at the moment of decision.

Where are the men and women of conviction and "backbone"? Those who are more headstrong on doing what is correct and expedient for the country, business, church or home. Men like President Lincoln who stood for what was right and holy when many attacked him personally, not to mention politi-

However, it is not just in leadership. I read a quote from a foreign dignitary who said the USA as a country can survive bad presidents and legislators for a season, but what we cannot survive a majority of constituents who are insistent on voting for leaders simply because of their party affiliation rather than their stand on issues of moral value or a vote that grants them more free money and benefits from the government

Is there an answer or solution? Yes, a thousand times yes. Just a cursory glance into the Wisdom Literature of Scriptures (Book of Proverbs) provides us an answer...Proverbs 4:5: "Get wisdom! Get understanding!...Proverbs 16:16: "How much better to get wisdom than gold! And to get understanding is to be chosen rather than silver." A third example is found in chapter 19:8: "He who gets wisdom loves his own soul; He who keeps understanding will find good." Those are just three as the entire book of Proverbs is given to grant men and women wisdom and understanding in literally every aspect of

Finally, a how to verse on wisdom is found in the book of James chapter 1 and verse 5; "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God who will grant it liberally and without regard of persons...." And that is a promise for every decision, obstacle or problem you face today, tomorrow and forever. Re-read the old definition of wisdom from Webster and set your sights on being a man or woman of wisdom and watch your world become new. Jim Neal is pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Shafter.

Local artists on stage

The Shafter Veterans Hall was the site of the Colours Festival Art Gallery, with a dozen local artists displaying their works. There was a great variety of mediums, from flower arrangements to 3D paintings. Among the artists was Colleen Diltz.

Diltz is a veteran photographer who has displayed pieces for several years at the Colours event. Each year, Diltz shows a collection of her photos that were taken in different locales. This year, Diltz had pictures from her travels throughout the world.

There was a stunning photo of an older woman puffing on a cigar. This photograph was taken while she was in Cuba. "I spent a month there, seeing the culture and sites from this intriguing country. It was a lot different than I thought it would be." Also in her collection, she has a glow-

Also on display was an "in memoriam" collection by Colleen's mother, Nancy Diltz. The pieces were of beautiful flowers and plants that Colleen said were from her mother's backyard. My mother and a friend of hers would sit out in her backyard and paint ation process differently For some, such as Diltz, it is the challenge of capturing that special moment in time, freezing that emotion, displaying it for all to see. For artists such as Mann, Mary Brooks, and Deanna Nelson, the process is one that takes time, patience, and a steady hand as they put their vision that is in their mind, onto the canvas. Brooks was featured last year at the festival for the first time. "I took an art class for something to do a couple of years ago and found that I really liked it," said Brooks. Brooks has among her collection a stunning piece of a tiger and another of a dancer that is on pointe, frozen in ready position.

Many of the attendees were surprised by the amount of local talent there was at the show. Mark Youslin was at the gallery with his wife, Linda, and commented, "You really don't realize how many talented people there are in the area until you go to something like this. They might have jobs as salespeople, farmers, teachers, office workers. But, they have that desire to created something, and this is a great way to let them do it."

Gen. Shafter gets his due

JAMIE STEWART The Shafter Press

A packed house was at the Shafter Learning Center on Saturday to hear Stan Wilson give a presentation on the town's namesake, Gen. William R.

As part of the Shafter Colours Festival, each year an author gives a presentation that informs the attendees about their works. Wilson is the curator of the Shafter Depot Museum and has written many pieces about the city's history that have been published in the Historical Society's newsletters.

Wilson prepared his presentation using a book documenting the life of Shafter written by Paul Carlson. Wilson also has given several presentations, including an informative session on the Dust Bowl era, which was also at the Shafter Learning Center.

Wilson said that Shafter was a Civil War veteran who was commissioned in the regular Army after the war as a lieutenant colonel. He spent 15 years leading the Colored Infantry as they sought to protect West Texas from Indians and Mexican and American bandits. Colonel Shafter was then transferred to Angel Island in San Francisco Bay. "Shafter was then promoted to brigadier general and given command of the Presidio at San Francisco.," Wilson added.

Shafter was then promoted to major general when the Spanish American War was declared, being selected to lead the invasion force. This decision was made in spite of the fact that Shafter was 63 years old at the time, weighed over 300 pounds and suffered from gout. "It is believed that one reason for his selection might have been his lack of political ambitions," Wilson commented, Shafter forced the surrender of the Spanish at Santiago, Cuba, in a short time and became a national hero. Wilson said that Shafter retired to a farm south of Bakersfield, next to the ranch of his son-in-law, William McKittrick in 1901. He died in 1906.

A siding on the San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley Railroad was named in his honor in 1898. That siding was later to become the town of Shafter.

through a set of classics, from swing band tunes to oldies.

Chili was on the menu at the park as the Annual Chili Cookoff was held. There were competitors in different categories, with entries ranging from mild to super hot. Team Scooter, headed up by City Manager Scott Hurlbert, returned to the event with their recipe, designated on the hot side of the scale. There were several varieties that suited whatever your every taste.

With the music, chili and cars, it was a satisfying afternoon at the park. "Every year I like to come to the park to listen to some great music, sample some good chili and this year they had the awesome cars down here. It was a blast," said Michael neat having so many things to do all in one creator Jim Henson.

For those looking to entertain their children over the weekend, the Children's Art Workshop was held at the Shafter Youth Center. Kids had the chance to get some hands-on assistance, letting them create a work of art that they could take home to their families. Artist Nicole St. John helped the children bring their vision to the canvas. The works were then put on display for all attendees to see.

Randel McGee and Groark returned to Shafter this year and played to a packed house at the Church of Christ on Saturday afternoon. McGee is an internationally known puppeteer that has been entertaining audiences throughout the world. McGee is also the recipient of the Citation for Out-Latham. "I actually live in Bakersfield, but standing Achievement in the Art of Puppet-I love coming to Shafter for this event. It is y Award, which was founded by Muppets

McGee uses a mix of stand-up comedy, witty banter, original songs and hilarious storytelling to appeal to young and old alike. For high school and adult film enthusiasts who would rather be part of the action than watching it, there was the Film Making Experience held at the Police Department meeting room. The workshop gave attendees the chance to learn what it takes to make a movie. Participants learned how to work a dolly, lighting, casting, editing and lighting. The workshop was put on by the Christian Youth Film Society. It was a hands-on experience in movie making.

This year, the Meet the Author event was held at the Shafter Learning Center and featured local historian Stan Wilson. Wilson gave an informational and entertaining presentation about the life and history of Shafter's namesake, General William Shafter. Wilson told of how the general, who had virtually no military experience, led his troops and became one of the main contributors to the nation's military history.

With the weekend full of events, there was something for just about any interest and taste. The success of the Festival depends on the support of the attendees and the hard work and dedication of community volunteers. Attendee Carol Lithrop commented, "It is kind of sad to see the arts kind of fading in today's world. Things like this weekend give people a chance to see so many kinds of art that we might not have anywhere else."

The students realize that they recognize the opening notes of the "Star Wars" theme.

Symphony performs for kids

This year, the Shafter Symphony celebrated the silver screen with several pieces from famous movies. All of the school districts that had students attend this year for this special event do not have orchestra programs at their respective schools. With that, concerts such as these might be the only exposure they get to classical music.

With the students waiting quietly for the concert to begin, not knowing what to expect, the faces lit up on the students as the familiar opening stanzas of the "Star Wars" theme was played. The kids did not expect to know any of the songs that were going to be played, but most recognized almost all of the pieces played at this concert.

After the Star Wars theme, conductor

Penner introduced all of the instruments and showed an example of what the different instruments sound like. One by one, the sections played a few bars, showing the students how each one produces sounds differently. After the demonstration, an ominous three notes played from the bass section. Kids recognized it as the start of the "Jaws" theme. The entire orchestra played their part, making the song build to a dramatic

There were two separate groups on Friday morning, with a total of 1,500 students in attendance to listen to the symphony. The symphony followed up the two performances with a sold-out performance at the same venue on Saturday night as part of the Colours Festival.

Recycling blues

It was this time last year that America got a huge wakeup call with our "recycling." China implemented their "national sword" -- otherwise known as the "China Ban" where they completely shut down accepting all U.S. recycling materials for an entire month. A year later, some may ask where we are now.

The tone has been set from last year. After the monthlong shut down, things very slowly started to pick back up, but with stricter enforcement on contamination. For what used to be acceptable to send a recycling load with 10 percent contamination was dropped to .05 percent allowable contamination on recycling. Containers rejected at the port. Even entire ship loads sent back. What does this mean for the consumer? Keeping our blue carts clean, without c ontaminating the loads with cloths, Household Hazardous Waste, shoes, diapers, electronics, dirty plastics (liquids still in them), dirty tin cans (food left in them/ unrinsed), and plastic bags, amongst many other things we find in the recycling can that don't belong there. The blue can is not meant to be an extra trash can. It is meant to take items out of the waste stream that can be made into something useable again instead of unnecessarily filling up our landfills.

After the blue cart leaves your curb, it travels to a material recovery facility. Items are then dumped out and sorted through a conveyer system where "good recyclable items" are handpicked out by staff. The recyclable items are then baled and sent to recycling manufacturing companies to be made into something new again. When consumers mis-place items in the blue cart that don't belong, it impedes the process, making it harder on the MRF staff that must pick through the items. Imagine trying to get cardboard off a conveyor with a smashed TV on it.

Another issue that comes up is when consumers put "dirty" items in the recycling container. That can contaminate other items, causing them to go into the trash versus being recycled. For example, when a consumer doesn't rinse a tin can and food drips all over a cardboard shipping box, the recyclers can't do anything with the dirty products. The cardboard now cannot go to the paper plant to be made into something else. The tin can will most likely be rejected for being dirty, and it now causes other items to be contaminated in your cart. CURRENT ACCEPT-

ABLE ITEMS:

Plastics: Code 1 (water and soft drink bottles) and Code 2 (milk jugs)

Paper products: cardboard, magazines, newspapers, cereal boxes, direct mail, phone books.

Metals: aluminum cans,

steel cans, tin cans (soup cans, veggie cans, coffee cans), foil and bakeware (only if rinsed and clean of food debris) Glass: clear (flint), brown (amber), green (emerald) glass

Cereal boxes are okay as long as the plastic lining is taken out of the box (cardboard box is good). Plastic inside is nonrecyclable and is considered contamination. Cardboard with plastic around it (water bottles with cardboard trays) need to be separated. Plastic goes in the trash. Cardboard goes into the recycling. Staff at a MRF cannot separate these on a conveyor belt. NONACCEPTED ITEMS:

Code 3 (PVC): dishwashing detergent bottles, window cleaners Code 4 (LDPE): dry-cleaning bags, frozen food wrappers, bags, bread squeezable bottles Code 5 (PP): yogurt containers, syrup bottles, catsup

Code 6 (PS): Items made from polyurethane (Styrofoam) foam-type coffee cups, foam-type egg cartons, foam-type plates Code 7 (other): items made from Nylon, bags,

5-gallon water bottles
